

Damaged Gas Meters

Subject

A high-pressure gas test shall not be required when a meter is damaged. A manometer test will be required.

Background

When only the gas meter is damaged, the entire system is not required to be tested. The inspector should check to see if other piping in the area has been damaged, but without clear knowledge of a problem, the interior piping system shall be assumed to be OK as tested at original construction.