Currently TMWA is working on manifolds designed to fit fire hydrants, pressure relief valves and the use of construction water sites for water hauling and large scale distribution of potable water.

Mr. DePolo emphasized the need to involve the public and continue to conducts safety drills. Mr. DePolo noted that the most dangerous action, yet most often used, is the tendency to exit a building during an earthquake. It is estimated that a 6.5 magnitude earthquake would cause an estimated $4-billion in damage in the Reno-Sparks area. Additional information can be found at www.shakeout.org/nevada.
